DPW Getting New Garage And Service Center On Friday

Yonkers Public Works Department is receiving a $1,880 million Christmas present this year. Mayor James F..X O'Rourke will play a figurative Santa Claus Friday at 11 a.m. when he officially dedicates the DPW's new garage and service center at 1130 Nepperhan Ave.

The ceremony will be crowded with officials but it's the hundreds of DPW personnel out doing their daily jobs that will cheer loudest, for the new center.

Public Works Commissioner George R. Roy, who shares his men's enthusiasm, says the new center will increase efficiency in his department.

The DPW will hopefully, move into its new home by the first week in January, he said.

Construction began on the center in December, 1967.

Some trucks are already parking in the north and south storage wings of the center.

Located on more than two acres of city property that runs parallel with the Saw Mill River Parkway, the center includes a large well lighted repair shop with modern overhead equipment and storage space for parts and tools. A truck port and service canopy will be constructed in the rear outside areas of the center next to the blacktop area with metered gas pumps.

City vehicles will now be able to gas up either there or at the old garage at the foot of Main Street.

Commissioner Roy said the old garage will be used to store seasonal equipment, like street sweepers, salt spreaders and snow plows.

"There will now be two locations from which we can deploy the snow fleet during a storm," he said.

City Engineer Vincent Castaldo said the city will not officially take over the center until all the items in the contract have been completed by the contractor.

Most of the equipment at the center will be installed by Friday, he said.

Modifications of the original plans of the center cut out a ramp and second floor parking with approximately $1 million cut in costs.

The NRS Construction Co. of Elmhurst were the contractors on the job Joseph L. Colasimo of Yonkers was the resident engineer on the job.

Other contractors on the job include William J. Wahl Inc. of White Plains, heating; Michael Harmonay Corp., plumbing; Ralph Electric Co. Electrical Work, and Westchester Auto Supply Inc., automotive equipment. All the firms are from Yonkers.

Buonefede Released On Bail

Salvatore Buonefede, 39, of 9 Sterling Ave., was released in $1,000 bail after his arrest yesterday on two gambling charges, police report.

Police charged him with promoting gambling and possession of horse bets. He was arrested at 1:45 p.m. at 5 Sterling Ave., described by police as a pool-room.

Guns Stolen

Guns were reported stolen in two burglaries here yesterday.

A revolver was taken from under the counter at Reggie's Wedges, a pizzeria at 123 New Main St., by a thief who broke in through a window.

A revolver was also reported taken at the Daniele Linen Co. on nearby Herrick Place.

Caps Taken

Seventy-five dynamite caps were reported taken from a construction shack broken into a t 984 N. Broadway, site of a new apartment house.

David Vick told police his apartment at 162 Woodworth Ave. was burglarized of $65 in clothing, a $115 television set and a $15 clock-radio.

Tenants Unit Calls Hike Selfish

The Yonkers Tenants Council took a shot yesterday at the trial balloon raised recently by the Investment Builders Council, charging that the hint of a $10 a month rent increase was part of a well disguised plan designed to divide the community in an effort to serve selfish interests.

The Investment Builders Council stated recently that tax increases in the city's proposed 1970 budget could force an increase in rents. The builders group cited increases in the new budget of 25 per cent in real estate tax, 50 per cent in water tax and one per cent in the sales tax.

Moe Gantcher, chairman of the Yonkers Tenants Council, said yesterday that the percentage of increase in realty taxes are "insignificant to the practices of gouging which has become the hall mark of the realty and building industry."

DIANE WOLKSTEIN TELLS A STORY IN CENTRAL PARK

Story Teller To Spin Her Magic

New York City's official storyteller, Diane Wolkstein, will highlight the annual Yonkers Rotary Club Christmas party for physically and visually handicapped children, tomorrow.

More than 35 area children will be hosted by the service club at the Tropical Acres Restaurant on Central Park Avenue.

Miss Wolkstein will be assisted by Andre Fisher in her presentation.

Philip Yelin, program chairman, said five children from area homes and hospitals and nine from Mount Vernon will join Yonkers boys and girls invited to the party. Transportation of these children has been arranged by the Board of Education.

Miss Wolkstein is a staff member of the New York City Parks Department. Her assistant is a former school teacher from that city.

Both have performed in summer programs in the poverty areas and parks in New York City.

This is a repeat performance for the two guests, who were so well received by the children at last year's Christmas party they were invited again.

Schweppes presents
3 uncommonly flavourful cocktail mixers.

Although prepared cocktail mixes must be counted among the blessings of modern social life, they all leave something to be desired in matters of taste and convenience.

It was to correct these lamentable shortcomings that Schweppes, which has purveyed distinguished accompaniments to liquor for 175 years, created three new and manifestly superior cocktail mixers. Added to your rum, vodka, or whiskey, they produce uncommonly flavourful and socially correct Daiquiris, Bloody Marys, and Whiskey Sours.

Schweppes Cocktail Mixers come in handy little 4-ounce bottles. The Whiskey Sour and Daiquiri Mixers make exactly two delicious drinks; the Bloody Mary, exactly one. You may mix them in the privacy of your kitchen and take all the credit for yourself, or prepare them in the living room and share the glory with us. In either case, your reputation will prosper.
